

AXIS CALIBRE

Calibre - basically, how good someone's judgment turns out to be, tracked over time

Where authority is earned, the best decision arrives first.

Redesigning how Axis Bank makes its most important decisions.

We're proposing a change to how decisions get made and governed - not a fancier performance review.

TEAM MOVES

Transformation Council Submission · Decision-Making & Governance

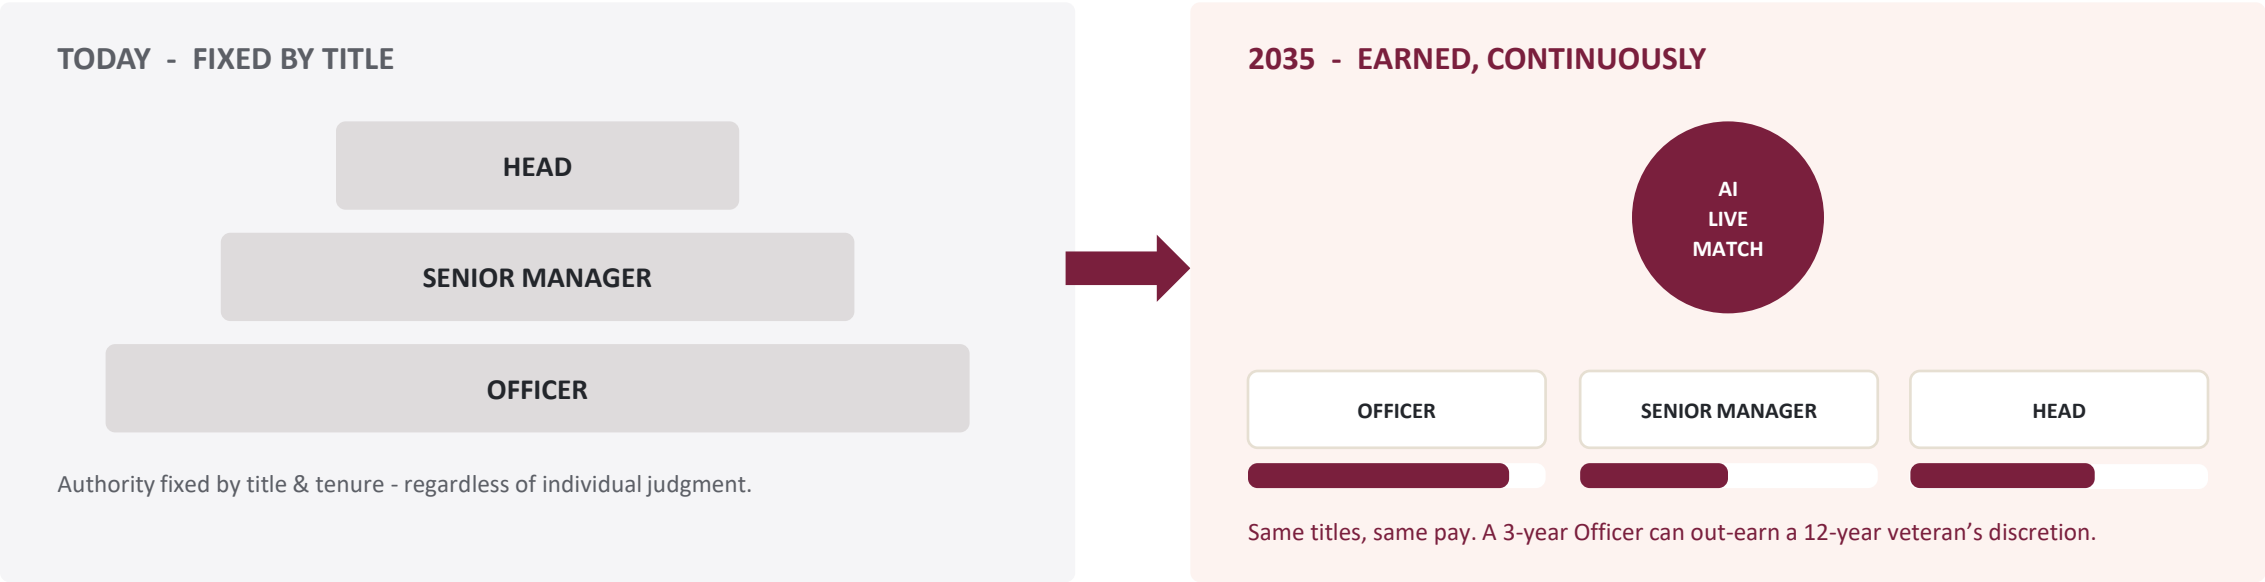

Good decisions shouldn't have to wait for senior titles.

Anjali receives her biggest export order and urgently needs working capital. Her Relationship Manager is confident the loan should be approved, but the request must move through multiple approval layers because authority is tied to designation. Twelve days later, the decision comes back exactly as originally recommended. The problem wasn't judgment. It was how judgment moved through the organization.

“Axis didn’t lose money on that loan. It lost the one thing Anjali needed most: speed.”

- We're changing how decisions reach the right people - not how employees are evaluated.
- Faster decisions come from trusting proven judgment, not from skipping checks.
- Today, a capable officer can make the right recommendation but still wait days for approval.
- By 2035, AI will be everywhere. The real advantage will be getting the right decision to the right person immediately

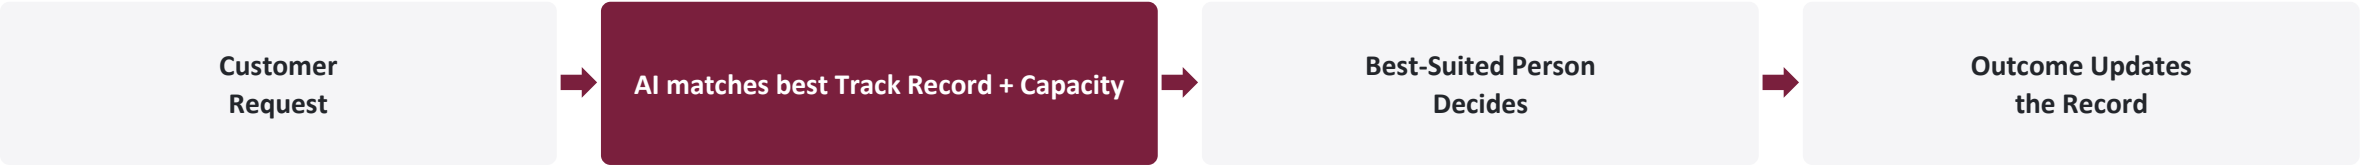

DECISION AUTHORITY- TODAY VS. 2035

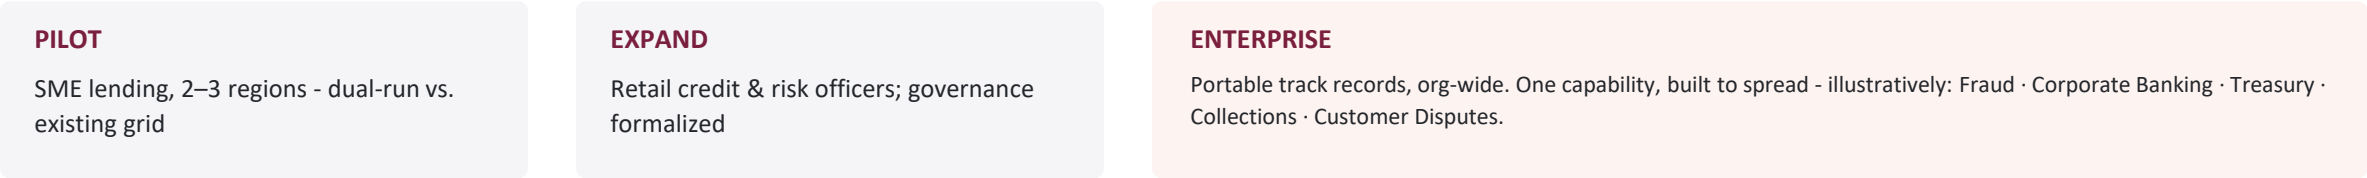

12 days down to same-day; because the right person is already on it, not because we rushed anything.

HOW IT WORKS & IMPACT

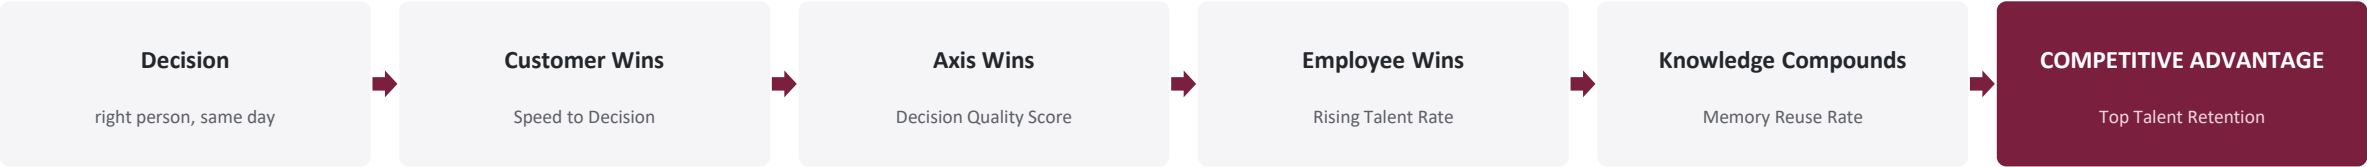

AI finds the right expert. People make the decision. Governance Stays Intact.

AI recommends and routes cases - it never approves them. Every decision stays within Axis's existing RBI-compliant sanctioning framework, with governance and fairness independently audited.

WHY IT COMPOUNDS

Risks: Gaming → difficulty-adjusted audits. Regulatory fit → inside existing sanctioning grid. Resistance → pay & title untouched.

By 2035, every bank will have similar AI. What will truly set Axis apart is an organization where great judgment is consistently recognized, trusted, and scaled.
